This Social Studies guide emphasizes teaching and learning United States History I, and comprises the fourth in a series of instructional guides that focus on the content and delivery of education services in DYS facilities across the state of Massachusetts. The DYS Instructional Guides are one component of the DYS LEED Education Initiative, an education reform effort supported by the Commonwealth Corporation and the Hampshire Educational Collaborative.

All materials in this guide are aligned with national standards from the National Council of Social Studies (NCSS), and the History and Social Studies Curriculum Framework from the Massachusetts Department of Education.

The content within these pages comes from dozens of talented and dedicated practitioners who have generously shared their expertise and best thinking about effective social studies instruction. In particular, Kelley Brown provided extensive writing and organization for all social studies content, and DYS educators Heather Duhamel and Erin O'Connor-Silverman shared exemplary teaching materials that are featured in this guide for use and adaptation by their professional peers.

The following individuals and organizations were also instrumental in creating this guide:

Kathy Rho and Janet Daisley of the Commonwealth Corporation in Boston, MA

Shirley Gilfether, Robin Warner, and Kristi Pozza of the Hampshire Educational Collaborative in Northampton, MA

Kelley Brown of the Easthampton Public Schools in Easthampton, MA, who provided vision and an unerring compass for the journey toward creating a meaningful Social Studies guide, and generously agreed to share previously copyrighted work on these pages

Beth Wohlleb Adel of Northampton, MA, a long-time educator who promotes cultural responsiveness and social justice in educational settings

Lynn Yanis (The Writer For You), who provided design, editing, and writing support for this Instructional Guide

We especially want to recognize the Department of Youth Services, its students, and the teachers and program staff who work every day to bring clarity and focus to the delivery of educational services in the DYS system. We offer special thanks to Christine Kenney, Director of Educational Services, and the DYS teachers who provided valuable feedback on this guide throughout its development:

Heather Duhamel • Sean Nyhan • Patricia O'Malley • Corey Rinehart
